No trackbacks yet. Photoshopping Michael Vick(notes) is all the rage these days. Apparently,nhl jerseys wholesale, he needs a new race, a new age,nike nfl football, or both. Here's the back cover of Tuesday's New York Post: No one has commented yet. By MJD The article the cover references is this one,mlb jersey sizing, with quotes from a bunch of Giants about how they believed their hits on Vick were perfectly clean. Of course they do. [Get the latest injury news and set your lineups with Yahoo,new nfl uniforms! Sports' Fantasy Football app] What do you think? Does Vick have a viable complaint? Do other quarterbacks get more calls? Do you have a problem with the New York Post depicting him as a baby? Vick, cheap basketball jerseys, as you'll recall, voiced some displeasure with how officials called the Eagles' loss to the Giants on Sunday. He wondered why hits on him didn't draw the same 15-yard penalties they draw when administered to other quarterbacks. Vick was careful to say he wasn't complaining (just as he finished complaining), but as the Post so aptly illustrates, people were going to take his comments as whining, no matter what he said. He pointed a finger at officials, and that makes him, nike nfl store, especially to people who are fans of rival teams like the Giants, a crybaby. Hence the Photoshop.
